

Through gross medical incompetence, compounded by denial and arrogance, a young woman is put into a chronic vegetative state from which there is no prospect of her ever recovering.

Those responsible for this disaster added to their disgrace by denying their victim her right to die. Rather, by tube feeding her, they locked her into a hideous state of suspense between life and death from which she cannot possibly escape without doctors allowing it.

Finally, after almost twenty years, the victim's mother was forced to take High Court proceedings compelling her daughter's carers to allow her daughter die with a modicum of dignity. In doing this, the victim's mother needed tremendous fortitude, single-mindedness, and resilience.

What is given here is, of necessity, fictionalized. However, the author, a retired doctor and coroner, was made sufficiently aware of the facts of the case by colleagues involved, to vouch for their accuracy in broad terms.

About The Author

Doctor Andrew Rynne was Ireland's first vasectomy doctor. In 1990, he was shot a few times whilst performing an operation on a patient. He is a former Irish medical practitioner, coroner, and the founder of County Kildare's Clane General Hospital. Rynne was the Irish Family Planning Association's Chair. Both his parents were well-known writers, and he is now a self-published author. His last TV documentary recently was on the Irish channel TG4 https://www.tg4.ie/en/player/home/?pid=6222150223001.
